COUNTY OF HANDOCK

WASHROTON - To complete the set complete officially, her is desirately to considering the possibility that the United Steem will have to pull out of Viet Nam char the promised cleaned to calcut a divilien government. Promier Ky has cold that, will observe will be held. a commenta or over a seminable poversessed would not be other a communic or a committe interver. And it's vidaly profilered that citize would damend a withdrawal of U.S. milkory forces. How for the possibility has preserved stated U.S. offine ing von illumerated lace verk view Som. Richard Rescalles Georgia, chairman of the Searce Armed Services Commission and a close friend of Proceeding Johnson, cold Amily alm "M is becomes clearly evident that a majority of the Viennamese do not want our help, I would lover withdrawing immedically both military forces and economic aid." A. U.S. recreas in Viet Nam would be a bitter will for LBJ orallow, for domectic as well as international reacons. First, if the Vistamece elections are held on coincials.

they will occur before our own Congressional elections, and could help the Republicans win even more cents than they now anticipate. This would not only be a blow to Johnson's precise but by giving new life to the COP could endanger his domectic program certoualy.

Second, an anti-American victory in the Viennamece elections could have serious economic repercussions in this country, further adding to Republican campaign ammunition. While the Viet Nor. was to not entirely responsible for our current high level of economic activity, it has added enough pressure to contribute noticeably to shortages-such as copper-and to the inflation threat

It has been widely predicted that the stock market, for example, would react charply to an end of the war in Viet Nom. Then there would be cutbacks in defense orders, layoffs for workers, and the very real possibility of at least a small recession.

Internationally, a U.S. withdrawal from Viet Nam. by edict of civilian government, would not be totally damaging. It would ease the precent tention with Moscow, for example, and permit the Kremlin to resume friendlier relations with the U.S. k would please many of our allies who have long wanted us to get out of what they have felt was a hopeless cituation. It would please Gen, de Caulle and might even coften his current anti-U.S. policies.

And in Viet Nam itself, since the Viet Cong effectively control most of the country anyway, it would not add greatly to the actual strength of the communist world, Red China would make a big noise about the victory over U.S. warmongers, of course, but in the final analysis we might come out without carious damage. We would also lose economically, however. U.S. companies have been doing tremendous construction jobs in South Viet Nam and they also would have to get out if the communists should win the elections. But, again, it could prove best in the long run. There's little point in pouring additional millions or billions into construction if the communists eventually are going to reap the benefits anyway.

Vielnamese weary of bosses

A young American television reporter in South Viet Nam given this explanation for the recent anti-U.S. outbursto co puzzling to many in this country: 'Displeadure with the war, with military government, with too many American troops, has grown, become organized and "I think I can understand Vietnamese frustration with our precence because it's somewhat aimilar to the cituation in Guinea, where they said they preferred freedom with poverty to slavery with wealth. 'Mony Vietnamese are unhappy with us, to the extent they might call us not masters but bosses. Americans want action and results. When there is neither, they want to take 'Americans have taken charge in many areas of Vietnamene civilian and military life, and the Viennamene don't like our decigiveness, our power, our wealth. I think they would prefer the Viet Cong.

'k's irrational, it doesn't make sense to a Western mind. But it seems to be the case."

That's the observation of a young American who has been in South Viet Nam for three years.

Mission to Mexico

President Johncon's sudden trip to Mexico may help to otem the anti-American sentiment arising in Latin America. However, it will take more than a single good will trip to rectore good relations. Chiefly, it will require the firing of Precident Johnson's close friend, Under Secretary of State Tom Mann, former ambassador to Mexico and the man who has caused the U.S. to make more mistakes in Latin American policy in the past two years than in the preceding two decades. Recently, Pan American delegates met in Panama to draft new plans for the Organization of American States. The U.S. delegate attending the conference agreed to various important new economic proposals. But when they were sent to Washington they were promptly vetoed by Mann. This caused an explosion in Mexico, where Mexican Foreign Minister Amonio Carrillo Flores, a good friend of the United States, told newspapermen that Washington's attitude h a d ceriously undermined the accomplishments of the OAS conference," and Mexican Ambapsador Rafael de la Colina bluntly called the American veto "inexcusably negative and stupid." This bitter resentment at the United States, and especially at his close friend, Tom Mann, was one of the backstage reacons why Johnson suddenly decided to go to Mexico City. The trip was important, worthwhile and productive, but it will bear no real fruit until the Precident reorganized the State Department and reorganizes his friend out.

Nader on pipelines

Young Ralph Nader, whose book, "Unsafe at Any Speed," touched off the furor over Detroit's failure to build safe automobiles, understandably is a bit cynical about the good intentions of U.S. corporate giams.

Now, having ocored against one Goliath, he almo to take on another—the pipeline industry. He's planning another book to ohow how the lack of adequate valery standards and inspection procedures is threatening more fatal pipeline explosions like the one that killed 17 people at Natchitochen, La., last year.
